MARXISM
AND FEMINISM

EDITED BY SHAHRZAD MOJAB

Marxism and Feminism From imusti

In this exciting new collection, scholars reassess historical debates about Marxism and feminism and seek out answers to the most pressing ideological questions in the field today. Using keyword organization for its contents, Marxism and Feminism presents a contemporary Marxist-feminist analysis grounded in a class-driven perspective that addresses capitalism, patriarchy, and racism. With contributions by both renowned scholars and exciting new voices across Asia, the Americas, and Europe, this book will be the foundational text for modern Marxist-feminist thought.

Editorial Review

Review

“Marxism and Feminism is a serious, nuanced collection that covers a great deal of ground in a clear and concise way. The essays here represent a profoundly warm, human way of thinking through some of the toughest political problems of our age. It will be of great use to anyone thinking seriously about the relationship between Marx and feminism, not to mention gender, race, class, intersectionality, patriarchy, work and many other key topics today.”

(Nina Power, author of One Dimensional Woman)

“The relationship between Marxists and feminists has always been problematic. But in these times of an ongoing crises of capitalism, when the whole world is looking for alternatives to the present destructive world system, Shahrzad Mojab's Marxism and Feminism is especially necessary today. I hope that many women and men read it.”

(Maria Mies, author of Patriarchy and Accumulation on a World Scale)

“Marxism and feminism are back! This book marks a refreshing return to basics after years spent in the wilderness of identity politics and the 'cultural turn'. Offering a rich synthesis of the key concepts in both schools of thought, the book provides a valuable resource for rethinking Marxism, feminism, a renewed project for human emancipation and, yes . . . revolution.”

(Radha D'Souza, University of Westminster)

“Marxism and Feminism is an outstanding contribution to the shared project of scholar-activists across diverse disciplines and movements. The collection is both the result of, and a significant contribution to, a (re)emerging conversation—one that attends to, as Shahrzad Mojab succinctly notes, 'two major emancipatory projects.' The keywords approach is inspired, providing breadth and depth in a single, accessible, and highly engaged volume.”

(Abigail B. Bakan, University of Toronto)

“Reading this book made me aware of how much such a book is needed to awaken a dialogue between Marxism and feminism. I didn't agree with all that I read, but that's exactly what a book with this framework should do to awaken us.”

(Dorothy Smith, University of Victoria)

(Against the Current)
